Southwell Court

Broad Oak, Hereford

This handsome 12-bedroom, 3 storey former Coaching Inn is set in 7.5 acres of mainly pastureland. Located between Broad Oak & Skenfrith, its elevated location produces attractive panoramic countryside views. Constructed in the 1830's by Lord Southwell, it has a Georgian appearance with 3 floors and a cellar & an extensive range of impressive, 2 storey stone outbuildings with potential to provide additional accommodation. The property is in need of refurbishment.

The small village of Garway is a short drive away with its popular primary school, active new, village hall/community centre, pub/restaurant and an ancient church having associations with the Knights Templar. There is easy access to major road networks, the city of Hereford (14 miles) Monmouth (6.5 miles) with its renowned schools and Ross-on-Wye (9 miles).

Constructed in stone with a rendered and painted exterior with wooden windows and doors set under a felted and slated roof. Its three floors have the benefit of high ceilings, wide staircases, moulded skirtings, architraves and picture rails, panelled doors, elm boarded and pine floorboards, some sashed windows with shutters and open fireplaces. Oil fired boiler (uncommissioned) with radiators set on two floors.

The approach is via a panelled front door with arched fan-light over into;
